Contends Inoculation
Can End Typhoid Deaths

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Mortality from typhoid can be absolutely abolished. This is the contention of Dr.
Chauffard of the French Academy, who is urging the French government to name compulsory the inoculation of adolescents against typhoid.

Professor Chauffard declared that war experience proved typhoid can be eradicated as easily as smallpox. The number of typhoid cases practically was nil during the war due to inoculation and few have suffered from the disease since demobilization.

Before the war those attacked were about 24 years old, according to Dr. Chauffard. Now the disease's wind the disease's statement to name compulsory the inoculation and few have suffered from the disease since demobilization.
